IELTS MINDSET

When you have to talk about IELTS topics like art, you may feel fear!

I think this might be because you believe you need to

- 1) be an art expert
- 2) speak like an 'Artist'
- 3) give some examples of art 😊

The first 2 are absolutely false!

You do not need to be an expert, nor talk like an artist.

However, you will need to have 1 or 2 examples to talk about. For this topic, having at least 1 picture and 1 exhibition you can talk about is important.

If you have never visited an art exhibition, don't worry, in this live lesson, (when you watch the video of the lesson), you can experience a virtual art tour and this is something you can talk about.

When it comes to describing a picture or painting, there are 3 things you can talk about:

- 1. The Picture
- 2. Your Feelings
- 3. The Artist

1. The Picture

It's a painting of a house / cafe / street

There are some tables / a lot of people / some stars in the sky

2. Your Feelings

It makes feel _____ (adj.)

It makes me feel warm / happy / curious / inspired

It gives me a feeling of _____ (n.)

It gives me a feeling of warmth / happiness / curiosity / inspiration

3. The Artist

It is not necessary to know the name of the painter, the name of the painting in English, nor when it was painted and what it means.

I mean, if you love art and you know all of that, then great, but it is not necessary.

You can just explain that you don't know that information and then simply describe the painting and / or your feelings.

Look at the two examples below. The first one is fine, but the second one is even better, showing off a wider range of vocabulary and grammar.

I like one painting called Guernica and it's by Picasso and it was painted in 1937.

2.

I like one painting that has chopped up bodies, I am not sure who it was painted by, nor when, but it gives me a feeling of sadness.

Students' Questions to Keith

Keith, what form of art do you prefer and why?

Well, it's a very interesting question and I haven't thought much about it, to be honest, but if I look at some of the paintings in my house,

I think I am probably a fan of impressionism and you know, that's a style of painting that's not very realistic but it's just ..., it has really nice smooth colours and vivid colours

You know those kind of paintings just make me feel really relaxed and calm and that's the kind of atmosphere I like to have in my bedroom or in the lounge where I have those paintings.

Keith, what do you think about digital art?

It's interesting you should ask that because just the other day I was listening to a podcast about digital art. There was a painting sold for something like 40 million dollars and it was digital art.

There's a lot of controversy around it because some people think that digital art is worthless in a way, because you can just copy it and take copies and put them on your phone or put them on your computer,

But when you think about it, I think it's the same with any kind of art, you can have copies on your walls of some of the most famous pieces of art.

Actually in contrast to that, the person on the podcast explained that the digital art is far safer and you can keep the authenticity of the art more secure than for a normal piece of art.

So, I think digital art has a very bright future. I think as our world moves online and technology plays a bigger role in our everyday lives.

Well, it will be the same with art, I think a lot of our art will become digital, I think it's very engaging for the children and that's a positive thing to get them interested in art.

So, yes, I think, we will see more and more digital art cropping up (=appearing) all of the place in the future.
